

Features and Benefits of the Motorola Atrix 4G

If you are someone who has to have all the latest and best products in the world of electronics, the Motorola Atrix 4G is definitely smartphone for you. It is currently one of the hottest devices on the market, and it is packed with a ton of new features that have never been seen before in a smartphone. It features a processor that is powerful enough to allow the device to run as a computer, and it actually performs at speeds that could make some computers seem sluggish. The Motorola Atrix 4G even includes other nifty features like a true biometric fingerprint scanner. Whether you need a powerful smartphone for business or you are looking for a cool phone to impress your friends, it is likely that the Atrix's advanced features could appeal to you. Before taking the plunge and picking up your very own Motorola Atrix, it is a good idea to take the time to compare both the pros and the cons of the device. The Motorola Atrix 4G's popularity can be attributed to the fact that it can be used as both a smartphone and a computer. By simply connecting the phone to Motorola's webtop computer, you can have a laptop wherever you go. If you prefer a desktop computer, you can also connect to a desktop mount and wireless keyboard and mouse. Once you are connected, all the information from your phone is available on the computer. In both instances, the computer is powered by the phone's processor. This can be incredibly useful for anyone who needs to regularly access information on both their phone and a computer. It is important to note, however, that neither the webtop nor the desktop mount is included with the phone. They are available as optional accessories from Motorola, and they come with pretty large price tags. The webtop accessory costs nearly as much as a regular netbook computer, but it only works when connected to the phone. For many users, it is simply more cost effective to pick up a netbook or laptop that can be used with or without a cell phone. Since the device can be used as a mobile hot spot, you will still be able to use a regular WiFi compatible netbook or laptop with your Atrix, and with sync cables, it is easy to transfer data between a computer and mobile phone. Without the optional docks, the Motorola Atrix 4G is still a very powerful mobile phone device. It includes features that are not yet present in many other smartphones on the market. It includes a four inch touch screen that is made from durable Gorilla Glass. Plus it offers some of the best image quality in the industry. It also has a very powerful dual core processor that allows the device to perform at blazing fast speeds. The Atrix runs on the Android 2.2 operating system, so multitasking is a breeze, and you will have access to countless apps in the Android Marketplace. In areas where AT&T 4G network coverage is available, the Atrix will allow you to download games, apps, and media, play videos, and browse the web at speeds that are faster than ever before. For camera and video buffs, the Atrix has a five megapixel camera that can capture still photos as well as HD videos. With three USB ports and an HDMI port, it is possible to view your media content on the big screen quickly and easily. The phone includes 16 GB of internal storage and can be upgraded to 32 GB with a Micro SD card. With the optional upgrade, it is possible to store vast amounts of content on your device without ever needing to worry about running out of space. The Motorola Atrix 4G is undoubtedly one of the most innovative and advanced smartphones currently on the market. By enabling a smartphone to act as a computer, Motorola has opened up a new world of possibilities in the world of mobile communication. Even without the optional webtop and desktop accessories, it is still one of the fastest and most powerful smartphones on the market. No matter what your exact needs may be, it is very likely that the Motorola Atrix 4G will provide you with all the performance and capabilities you could never need in a mobile device.
